Why do we pay your child benefit on your bank account?

The deposit of your child benefit on a bank account is simple, safe and free.

Who completes this form?

The form must be completed by the recipient (usually the mother).

What kind of bank account?

Family allowances are paid only on a current account in your name or on a common account in your name and on, for example : your spouse or partner.

The payment of family allowances to a savings account, investment account, term account or the account of a third person, even if you are an agent, is not allowed.

KidsLife will check the data you have entered on the attached form with your bank. If your bank informs us that the financial account you have entered is not a current account or that you are not the (co-) account holder, then the family allowance fund will ask you to provide another account number.

If you do not provide an account number, family benefits will be paid by means of a circular check.

Payment on a current account is simple and safe!
